Declaration of the State of Israel

The declaration of the State of Israel on May 14, 1948, was a momentous event, marking the culmination of decades of Jewish nationalist aspirations and the establishment of a Jewish homeland in Palestine.

David Ben-Gurion, the head of the Jewish Agency, made the declaration in a ceremony held at the Tel Aviv Museum.

In his proclamation, he announced the establishment of a Jewish state in the land of Israel, to be known as the State of Israel.

The declaration emphasized the historical connection of the Jewish people to the land, the hardships they had endured throughout history, and their right to self-determination.

It also extended an olive branch, calling for peace with neighboring states and assuring the Arab inhabitants of Israel of their civil rights.

The United States, under President Harry S. Truman, was the first country to recognize the State of Israel, doing so just 11 minutes after its declaration of independence.

The Lakham People

The biblical Hebrew word for fight is Lakham. When the Jewish people came back to the land of Israel, they had to quickly organize an army for the first time in over 2000 years and learn to fight. It turned out to be one of the most effective and powerful fighting forces in history. You may not be a fighter in the natural realm, but in the spiritual realm you cannot be a pacifist. You have to fight. If you're a child of light, you have to stand against the darkness. If you don't fight back, you'll lose because you're already in a fight. Your enemy attacks your faith, your joy, your love, and your relationship with God. The soldier who doesn't realize he's in a battle is a sitting duck for the enemy. Don't be a sitting duck. Fight back- not against people, but against darkness. Fight the good fight of faith, love, joy, truth, righteousness, and hope. Stop living on the defensive and start overcoming. Put up your spiritual fists and come out swinging. You're on the winning side, but you can't win if you don't fight.
