Declaration of the State of Israel

The declaration of the State of Israel on May 14, 1948, was a momentous event, marking the culmination of decades of Jewish nationalist aspirations and the establishment of a Jewish homeland in Palestine.

David Ben-Gurion, the head of the Jewish Agency, made the declaration in a ceremony held at the Tel Aviv Museum.

In his proclamation, he announced the establishment of a Jewish state in the land of Israel, to be known as the State of Israel.

The declaration emphasized the historical connection of the Jewish people to the land, the hardships they had endured throughout history, and their right to self-determination.

It also extended an olive branch, calling for peace with neighboring states and assuring the Arab inhabitants of Israel of their civil rights.

The United States, under President Harry S. Truman, was the first country to recognize the State of Israel, doing so just 11 minutes after its declaration of independence.
